Location & surrounding area:

Port Adriano is a sophisticated superyacht port located on Mallorca's southwest coast. Having undergone a transformation led by revered architect Philippe Starck, the marina reopened in 2012. Since its redevelopment, Port Adriano has firmly established itself as one of the Mediterranean's most advanced marinas and caters to the elite. Unsurprisingly, the surrounding area has also improved drastically over the past few years. Property owners benefit from proximity to the harbour, several beaches, nature trails, international schools and three golf courses all on their doorstep. There is a warm, international community here and the area has a buzz the whole year round unlike quieter parts of the island. This makes Port Adriano a great destination during both the low and the high season and is an ideal place for permanent residence. The southwest of Mallorca is very well connected thanks to an arterial highway. By car, you can get to other popular destinations such as Portals, Palma and the international airport in around 10, 20 and 30 minutes respectively.
